I dove Children's Pool a couple years ago with friend. We were careful about the seals as we went in and we came back from a fine dive. We also watched coming out to see the seals were ok with us. When we got to the stair a big guy started his video camera a couple feet from my face and said "Congratulations, you just flushed 50 seals". I knew he was lying and just said "I don't think so". To keep the camera close in my face he had to walk backwards up the stairs in front of me and then followed me back to my car. He elaborately filmed my license plate and stood around, I suppose hoping to film us do something bad.

I didn't care, but my friend never went there again.
